Dr Linda Upadhyaya, EIC's founder and first director said, "The most important professional in a child's care is the mother."

Kids

The heart and soul of the Latika Roy Foundation is the children. They are our inspiration and our driving force. They remind us daily what we are doing here and why inclusion is so vital.

Parents are everything. In a country with too few rehabilitation professionals, the only way for children with disabilities to get what they need is for their parents to be motivated, trained and empowered to deliver it. Parent empowerment and training has always been key at the Early Intervention Centres. Now we are making it as vital in the school and the college as well.

When parents get the support and encouragement they need - through counseling, training and the occasional gentle push - they find the strength to be their kids' best advocates.

We now have two EICs and the school and college continue to grow. All four centres offer popular afternoon programs for children on the waiting list or in mainstream schools. Latika Vihar has become fully inclusive - over 25% of the children enrolled have special needs.

Our joyful, creative, activity-based centres are pioneers in the field of special education and therapy. We keep trying new approaches, documenting what works well and learning from what doesn't. We use inclusive technologies to enhance learning and communication and new systems are in place to chart kids' progress and share that information with parents and other professionals.

Outreach

Big picture/little picture. Where to focus our efforts? This year the Foundation's awareness team tried to do both: Big stuff like policy level change through participation in national campaigns on the new disability act, census training and awareness and supported decision making for adults with mental handicap.

But the small changes matter too: school awareness programs to help youngsters experience and think about disability in new ways; sensitization drives to make vikram, bus and railway employees understand the difficulties people with disability have using public transport; training sessions for ASHA workers so that they can identify and refer children with disabilities in their neighborhoods; internships for law, management and media students which may affect their long-term career goals; advocacy for individual students to get them into mainstream schools and helping people with disability find jobs.

Our now venerable Help Desks at the Doon Hospital and Chief Medical Office provide awareness and referrals for thousands of people with disability every year, culminating in our annual Concessions Mela - a one-stop-shop for disability certificates and a host of government services.

Our lecture series is now in its eighth year and is a major event in the city which people look forward to and discuss long after it is over. This year's keynote speaker, Dr Martha Rose, led a panel discussion on Differentiated Education and the need for schools to address each child's specific learning style.

The Dehradun Disability Forum meets regularly each month and relations across organizations have developed in positive and productive ways with this new emphasis on sharing resources and knowledge.

Training, Research, Organizational Development

There was an old man with a beard
Who said, "It is just as I feared!
Two Owls and a Hen, Four Larks and a Wren
Have all built their nests in my beard!"
Edward Lear

There is only so much that one organization can do. Even with the best will in the world, it's impossible for us to respond to every request we receive. And, in many ways, it isn't even sensible. When people take responsibility for their own lives, they find their own solutions.

To be a resource centre, training is crucial. Other individuals and organizations must be equipped to do what we do so that the work can spread. To this end, we have invited many of the best and the brightest in the field to come and share their expertise with us and with others in the area - both parents and professionals.

We have improved our own skills through attending courses and seminars in India and around the world. Two senior staff went abroad for training this year - Manju Singhania to the US and Sebastian Gruschke to the Netherlands - for specialized training in language development and developmental pediatrics, then returned to share their new experiences with the team.

We have documented all our systems and put mechanisms in place to monitor and understand which practices work and which are a waste of time. The process took months of hard work but at last, we are able to articulate most of what we do and how we do it.

There is a new sense of activism and purpose among the parents this year as more and more of them confront the big question: Karuna Vihar ke baad, kya hoga? Spearheaded by Shaila Brijnath, a former staff member and Shantanu Sharma, one of our most progressive parents, the group is now a registered society named Asemit, exploring employment options and a day centre for our students once they become adults.

A fledgling organization 'Abhiprerana' in Haridwar opened a special school with our support. After a series of workshops for the parents and staff, we helped them develop outreach material and guided them on systems and procedures. Many visits later, the organization now feels confident about working for people with special needs in Haridwar.

Gramin Samudaik Vikas Seva Sansthan in Rudraprayag assists village children with special needs. Their home-based program urgently needed trained staff. Four staff participated in our two week basic training course in special needs and one did the three month assistant teachers training course. We will support two such organizations every year.

Income in 2009-2010

Expenditure in 2009-2010

We are proud that fully 83% of our income this year went directly to services for children and adults with disability. While some administrative costs are unavoidable (12%) and raising funds requires an investment (5%), we keep these expenses low, ensuring that your contributions go where we know your heart lies: with the children.

We remain grateful to the Sir Ratan Tata Trust and the Sir J R D Tata Trust for their continued and generous support - both financial and conceptual - over many years.

The Latika Roy Foundation started 16 years ago as a little project with a large vision: to work for the rights and needs of our most vulnerable children. Today, we are moving closer to our dream: an inclusive world, where the strong and the vulnerable live, learn and work together. It's a world symbolic of the change in attitude that is slowly but surely transforming our nation.

HERE'S OUR CHANCE to thank those who have helped us since the beginning: Our donors who believe in our vision and whose selfless giving creates opportunities for hundreds of children and young adults, our volunteers from all over the country and world who come to share their passion and their skills, our staff who do what they do with joy and devotion, pouring their hearts into their work and making the world a better place, and our children, who inspire us and make everything worthwhile.

We started with 2 children with special needs in Karuna Vihar School and now we work with almost 200. They prove to us daily that with the right environment and the right attitude, miracles are possible.

We are grateful for your moral, intellectual and financial support. With your help, we have raised a little over one crore ($221,000) this year and we have used it all to do the work we share here in this report. We need your support even more in the coming year as we begin construction of our own campus. To donate online, please follow the link on our homepage (www.latikaroy.org).

To donate in the United States, please make your check to "Indians for Collective Action" with LRF in the memo section and send c/o Abhay Bhushan, 3838 Mumford Ave, Palo Alto CA, 94306. To donate in India, make your check out to Latika Roy Foundation and post to the address below.

We hope you are proud of the organisation you are such a vital part of. Thank you for the past, thank you for the now, thank you for all that is yet to be.
